

Turin Spring School on EU Integration, Law and Justice - 5th edition

Civic Engagement in the Green Transition: Mobilisation and Resistance

Jean Monnet Chair "Civic Engagement, Rights and Remedies in EU Law"

6-8 May 2024

Turin - Luigi Einaudi University Campus

Civil society has been one of the motors of the Green Transition. Environmental NGOs and movements have been at the forefront of raising awareness regarding the necessity to abandon fossil fuels and embrace sustainable development. However, the swift transition to a climate-neutral economy by 2050, as envisioned by the European Green Deal, requires a comprehensive overhaul of industrial, economic, labour and social policies and entails significant distributive effects. Thus, the policies behind the Green Transition are also liable to trigger a backlash, as it is already occurring in several Member States where the implementation of the Green Deal has become a political battleground. This Spring School wants to examine the EU path toward the Green Transition through the lens of civic engagement, by analysing the actors that support or oppose environmental policies and how the EU political and judicial institutions mediate their ability to mobilize. The Turin Spring School, organised by the Law Department of the University of Turin (Hub 3 - Environment and Climate Change), will address this topical issue through a combination of lectures and workshops.

Confirmed Speakers Chiara Armeni (Université Libre de Bruxelles), Roberto Caranta (University of Turin), Bruno De Witte (Maastricht University), Chris Hilson (University of Reading), Marta Morvillo (University of Amsterdam)

Who should apply The Turin Spring School is directed primarily at master and PhD students, post-doctoral and other early-career researchers with a strong interest in EU law and/or European integration. Attendance is limited to a maximum of 35 participants.

To apply, please send your CV to turinschooleulaw@gmail.com by 28 February 2024. Selected applicants will be required to pay 30 Euros to cover the cost of lunches for the three days of the School.

Organising Committee: Francesco Costamagna, Alberto Miglio, Stefano Montaldo, Virginia Passalacqua

